In a member managed LLC, the apparent authority of a member to bind the LLC in dealing with third parties:

- A. Must be derived from the express powers and purposes contained in the operating agreement.
- B. Will be effectively limited by a formal resolution of the members of which third parties are unaware.
- C. Would permit a member to submit a claim against the LLC to arbitration.
- D. Will be effectively limited by a formal resolution of the members of which third parties are aware.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Choice "c" is correct. This is really an agency question on apparent authority. Apparent authority is authority that a third party reasonably believes an agent has. If the third party is aware of a restriction on the agent's authority, the third party cannot reasonably believe that the agent has the restricted authority.

Choice "a" is incorrect. Submitting a claim to arbitration is an extraordinary act and so is not within a member's apparent authority. Choice "b" is incorrect. Apparent authority is derived from what the reasonable person believes is the authority of a member, not the express powers and purposes contained in the operating agreement. Choice "d" is incorrect. A formal resolution of the members will not be effective to destroy apparent authority if third parties are unaware of the resolution.
