NEW QUESTION: 1
The service provider has allocated a block of IPv4 addresses for your network 172.16.1.0 with a subnet mask of 25 bits. You company DHCP server was configured to use this block According to your company standards, the first available IP address is 172.16.1.130. The NOC has informed you that devices that use this block have partial connectivity. They communicate with other but cannot reach out side networks.

What is the reason for this behavior?
A. Because everything is configured correctly, the most likely cause is a connectivity issue with a service provider.
B. Because everything is configured correctly, the most likely cause is a DHCP server issue
C. The service provider, by mistake, allocated the RFC 1918 address.
D. The IP addresses that are distributed by the DHCP server are not on the same subnet as a default gateway
Answer: D

NEW QUESTION: 2
Company XYZ has encountered an increased amount of buffer overflow attacks. The programmer has been tasked to identify the issue and report any findings. Which of the following is the FIRST step of action recommended in this scenario?
A. Code Review
B. Capability Maturity Model
C. Baseline Reporting
D. Quality Assurance and Testing
Answer: A
Explanation:
A buffer overflow attack attacks a vulnerability caused by poor coding in an application. Reviewing the code of the application will enable you to identify code that is vulnerable to buffer overflow.
A buffer overflow occurs when a program or process tries to store more data in a buffer (temporary data storage area) than it was intended to hold. Since buffers are created to contain a finite amount of data, the extra information - which has to go somewhere - can overflow into adjacent buffers, corrupting or overwriting the valid data held in them. Although it may occur accidentally through programming error, buffer overflow is an increasingly common type of security attack on data integrity. In buffer overflow attacks, the extra data may contain codes designed to trigger specific actions, in effect sending new instructions to the attacked computer that could, for example, damage the user's files, change data, or disclose confidential information. Buffer overflow attacks are said to have arisen because the C programming language supplied the framework, and poor programming practices supplied the vulnerability.

NEW QUESTION: 3
A user has moved an object to Glacier using the life cycle rules. The user requests to restore the archive after 6 months. When the restore request is completed the user accesses that archive. Which of the below mentioned statements is not true in this condition?

A. The archive will be available as an object for the duration specified by the user during the restoration request
B. The user can modify the restoration period only by issuing a new restore request with the updated period
C. The restored object's storage class will be RRS
D. The user needs to pay storage for both RRS (restored) and Glacier (Archive) rates
Answer: C
Explanation:
AWS Glacier is an archival service offered by AWS. AWS S3 provides lifecycle rules to archive and restore objects from S3 to Glacier. Once the object is archived their storage class will change to Glacier. If the user sends a request for restore, the storage class will still be Glacier for the restored object. The user will be paying for both the archived copy as well as for the restored object. The object is available only for the duration specified in the restore request and if the user wants to modify that period, he has to raise another restore request with the updated duration.
