NEW QUESTION: 1

A company uses PeopleSoft to generate a unique employee designator as each new employee is entered into the HR system. IBM Tivoli Identity Manager has been configured to import the HR data from PeopleSoft, including the unique identifier (gbcuid). As a policy, the company has used the gbcuid attribute as the DID of its managed targets. Recently, IBM consultants implemented the AD service to manage the company's primary AD domain. During the discovery phase, it was found that an older algorithm for generating AD UIDs had been used before the company's policy of using the gbcuid attribute. The older algorithm concatenated the last name with a serial number. Which action could the IBM consultants take to match all of the AD accounts to their corresponding person entities?

A. Create an adoption rule that includes logic for returning people that correspond to the older algorithm, and in the Add workflow, set the erliases values to the gbcuid; then rerun the AD reconciliation

B. In the Add workflow, set the erllases values to both the gbcuid and the value generated by the older algorithm; then rerun the data feed from PeopleSoft.

C. Create an adoption rule that includes logic for returning people that correspond to both eraliases and the older algorithm; then rerun the data feed from PeopleSoft.

D. Create an adoption rule that includes logic for returning people that correspond to both eraliases and the older algorithm; then rerun the AD reconciliation.
