A customer wants to improve write performance on their FAS2552 HA system. The system is built with SAS drives, and they are not interested in purchasing additional disk shelves. The workload consists of mostly small, random overwrites and random reads.

What should the customer do to improve performance?

- A. Increase the amount of NVRAM in the system.
- B. Enable free space reallocation on the aggregate.
- C. Enable FlashCache on both nodes.
- D. Assign a Flash Pool RAID group to the aggregates.

Answer: D

Explanation:

A Flash Pool is built from a Data ONTAP aggregate in a two-step process, described in section 3,1, "7-Mode CLI." Essentially it is the addition of SSDs into an aggregate to provide a high-bandwidth, low-latency location that is capable of caching random reads and random overwrites.
