NEW QUESTION: 1

What happens during a normal backup? (Select two)

- A. The archive bit is left alone.
- B. The archive bit is reset to 0.
- C. The transaction log is cleared.
- D. The transaction log is left alone.
- E. The archive bit is set to 1.

Answer: B,C

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Normal backup - Backs up files and resets the archive bit. The archive bit is used to determine if the file has been backed up or not.

A normal backup backs up database files and then the transaction log files. It then deletes the transaction log files from the directory. You can have circular logging disabled because your backup software deletes the log files. Therefore, if you are performing regular backups, you will not have a problem with log files filling your drive.
