NEW QUESTION: 2

Which of the following is an advantage of a token bus (IEEE 802.4) network?

- A. It maintains signal integrity as the network grows.
- B. It operates at a consistently high data speed.
- C. It is not limited by physical distances.
- D. It operates well under heavy loads.

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION: 3

When a new key business application goes into production, the PRIMARY reason to update relevant business impact analysis (BIA) and business continuity/disaster recovery plans is because:

- A. software licenses may expire in the future without warning.
- B. service level agreements may not otherwise be met.
- C. this is a requirement of the security policy.
- D. the asset inventory must be maintained.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

The key requirement is to preserve availability of business operations. Choice A is a correct compliance requirement, but is not the main objective in this case. Choices B and C are supplementary requirements for business continuity/disaster recovery planning.

NEW QUESTION: 4

Which of the following is an advantage of a token bus (IEEE 802.4) network?

- A. It maintains signal integrity as the network grows.
- B. It operates at a consistently high data speed.
- C. It is not limited by physical distances.
- D. It operates well under heavy loads.

Answer: A

Explanation:

A rendezvous point (RP) is required only in networks running Protocol Independent Multicast sparse mode (PIM-SM).

By default, the RP is needed only to start new sessions with sources and receivers.

Reference:

/rps.html

For your information, in PIM-SM, only network segments with active receivers that have explicitly requested multicast data will be forwarded the traffic. This method of delivering multicast data is in contrast to the PIM dense mode (PIM-DM) model. In PIM-DM, multicast traffic is initially flooded to all segments of the network. Routers that have no downstream neighbors or directly connected receivers prune back the unwanted traffic.
