NEW QUESTION: 3 Which type of header attack is detected by Cisco ASA basic threat detector?A. failed application inspectionB. denial by access listC. connection limit exceededD. bad packet formatAnswer: DExplanation:Explanation/Reference:Explanation: Using basic threat detection statistics, the ASA monitors the rate of dropped packets and security eventsdue to the following reasons:* Denial by access lists* Bad packet format (such as invalid-ip-header or invalid-tcp-hdr-length)* Connection limits exceeded (both system-wide resource limits, and limits set in the configuration)* DoS attack detected (such as an invalid SPI, Stateful Firewall check failure)* Basic firewall checks failed (This option is a combined rate that includes all firewall-related packet dropsin this bulleted list. It does not include non-firewall-related drops such as interface overload, packets failedat application inspection, and scanning attack detected.)* Suspicious ICMP packets detected* Packets failed application inspection* Interface overloadReference: http://www.cisco.com/c/en/us/td/docs/security/asa/asa82/configu ration/guide/config/conns_threat.html#wp1067533

NEW QUESTION: 4 Which three are characteristics of an IPv6 anycast address? (Choose three.)A. a unique IPv6 address for each device in the groupB. any-to-many communication modelC. one-to-many communication modelD. one-to-nearest communication modelE. the same address for multiple devices in the groupF. delivery of packets to the group interface that is closest to the sending deviceAnswer: D,E,FExplanation:A new address type made specifically for IPv6 is called the Anycast Address. These IPv6 addresses are globaladdresses, these addresses can be assigned to more than one interface unlike an IPv6 unicast address. Anycast isdesigned to send a packet to the nearest interface that is a part of that anycast group.The sender creates a packet and forwards the packet to the anycast address as the destination address which goes tothe nearest router. The nearest router or interface is found by using the metric of a routing protocol currently runningon the network. However in a LAN setting the nearest interface is found depending on the order the neighbors werelearned. The anycast packet in a LAN setting forwards the packet to the neighbor it learned about first.
