NEW QUESTION: 1

Your Exchange Server 2007 environment is configured with cluster continuous replication (CCR). The name of the clustered mailbox server is ExchCMS1.

You need to minimize downtime, and you need to ensure that no data loss occurs during a failover operation .

Which cmdlet should you run?

- A. Set-MailboxDatabase -Identity "Mailbox Database" -RetainDeletedItemsUntilBackup $true
- B. Set-MailboxServer ExchCMS1 - AutoDatabaseMountDial:Lossless
- C. Set-MailboxServer ExchCMS1 - AutoDatabaseMountDial:BestAvailability
- D. Set-MailboxServer ExchCMS1 - ForceDatabaseMountAfter:Unlimited

Answer: B

Explanation:

Set-MailboxServer -

The AutoDatabaseMountDial parameter specifies the automatic database mount behavior for a cluster continuous replication (CCR) solution after a clustered mailbox server failover. You can use the following values:

BestAvailability. If you specify this value, the databases will automatically mount if the copy queue length is less than or equal to six. The copy queue length is the number of logs recognized by the passive node that need to be replicated. If the copy queue length is more than six, the databases will not automatically mount. When the copy queue length is less than or equal to six, Exchange will attempt to replicate the remaining logs to the passive node and will mount the databases.

GoodAvailability. If you specify this value, the databases will automatically mount immediately after a failover if the copy queue length is less than or equal to three. The copy queue length is the number of logs recognized by the passive node that need to be replicated. If the copy queue length is more than three, the databases will not automatically mount. When the copy queue length is less than or equal to two, Exchange will attempt to replicate the remaining logs to the passive node and will mount the databases.

Lossless. If you specify this value, the databases will not automatically mount until all logs that were generated on the active node have been copied to the passive node. The default value is BestAvailability. If you specify either BestAvailability or GoodAvailability, and all of the data on the active node has not been replicated to the passive node, you may lose some mailbox data. However, the transport dumpster feature (which is enabled by default) will help protect against data loss by resubmitting messages that are in the transport dumpster queue. For more information about the transport dumpster, see Cluster Continuous Replication. If specifying one of these values results in a database not being mounted after a failover, you can use the ForcedDatabaseMountAfter parameter to force the database to mount after a specified amount of time.
