NEW QUESTION: 1

You plan to allow users to run internal applications from outside the company's network. You have a Windows Server

2012 R2 that has the Active Directory Federation Services (AD FS) role installed. You must secure on-premises resources by using multi-factor authentication (MFA). You need to design a solution to enforce different access levels for users with personal Windows 8.1 or iOS 8 devices.

Solution: You migrate the AD FS server to Microsoft Azure and connect it to the internal Active Directory instance on the network. Then, you use the Workplace Join process to configure access for personal devices to the on-premises resources.

Does this meet the goal?

- A. No
- B. Yes

NEW QUESTION: 3

A risk manager has decided to use likelihood and consequence to determine the risk of an event occurring to a company asset. Which of the following is a limitation of this approach to risk management?

- A. Requires a high degree of upfront work to gather environment details.
- B. Calculations can be extremely complex to manage.
- C. Subjective and based on an individual's experience.
- D. Difficult to differentiate between high, medium, and low risks.
- E. Allows for cost and benefit analysis.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Using likelihood and consequence to determine risk is known as qualitative risk analysis.

With qualitative risk analysis, the risk would be evaluated for its probability and impact using a numbered ranking system such as low, medium, and high or perhaps using a 1 to 10 scoring system.

After qualitative analysis has been performed, you can then perform quantitative risk analysis. A quantitative risk analysis is a further analysis of the highest priority risks during which a numerical or quantitative rating is assigned to the risk.

Qualitative risk analysis is usually quick to perform and no special tools or software is required. However, qualitative risk analysis is subjective and based on the user's experience.
