NEW QUESTION: 1

- A. Option D
- B. Option B
- C. Option C
- D. Option A

Answer: B

Explanation:

Data Transfer Rate The data transfer rate (also called transfer rate) refers to the average amount of data per unit time that the drive can deliver to the HBA. In a read operation, the data first moves from disk platters to R/W heads; then it moves to the drive's internal buffer. Finally, data moves from the buffer through the interface to the host HBA. In a write operation, the data moves from the HBA to the internal buffer of the disk drive through the drive's interface. The data then moves from the buffer to the R/W heads. Finally, it moves from the R/W heads to the platters. The data transfer rates during the R/W operations are measured in terms of internal and external transfer rates, as shown in the slide.

Internal transfer rate is the speed at which data moves from a platter's surface to the internal buffer (cache) of the disk. The internal transfer rate takes into account factors such as the seek time and rotational latency. External transfer rate is the rate at which data can move through the interface to the HBA. The external transfer rate is generally the advertised speed of the interface, such as 133 MB/s for ATA. The sustained external transfer rate is lower than the interface speed.

NEW QUESTION: 2

Your network contains an Active Directory domain named contoso.com. The domain contains a server named Server1 that runs Windows Server 2012 R2. Server1 has the Active Directory Certificate Services server role installed and is configured as an enterprise certification authority (CA).

You need to ensure that all of the users in the domain are issued a certificate that can be used for the following purposes:

Email security

Client authentication

Encrypting File System (EFS)

Which two actions should you perform? (Each correct answer presents part of the solution. Choose two.)

- A. Modify the properties of the User certificate template, and then publish the template.
- B. From a Group Policy, configure the Certificate Services Client - Certificate Enrollment Policy settings.
- C. From a Group Policy, configure the Certificate Services Client - Auto-Enrollment settings.
- D. From a Group Policy, configure the Automatic Certificate Request Settings settings.
- E. Duplicate the User certificate template, and then publish the template.

Answer: C,E

Explanation:

The default user template supports all of the requirements EXCEPT auto enroll as shown below:

However a duplicated template from users has the ability to autoenroll:

The Automatic Certificate Request Settings GPO setting is only available to Computer, not user.
